

The latest iPhone from Apple, recently launched in the US, will be on sale in European Capi airport electronics stores in the next few weeks, says the retailer. An initial stock supply is already available at the Capi stores at Schiphol Amsterdam Airport.

The iPhone6 is the eagerly awaited successor to the iPhone 5S and is better in every way, according to Apple. 'The iPhone 6 and iPhone 6 Plus constitute a new generation of iPhone – larger yet thinner and more power efficient,' it explains.

The impressive specification list includes a high resolution Retina display, A8 chip and an 8 megapixel camera, to name just a few.

Says Peter Wiggers, Managing Director, Royal Capi-Lux, "At Capi we know what travellers want and the Capi shops are the ideal setting for the Dutch launch of Apple's latest innovation. Passengers expect to find the newest and the best at airports, and with the iPhone 6 we cater to business and leisure travellers alike."

The iPhone 6 and iPhone 6 plus are available in silver, gold and space grey. The smartphones are currently on display in Capi's 'It's Exclusive!' Showcase at Schiphol airport. International launches in other Capi stores will take place later in the year.
